Rent Increase Summary

This summary keeps the proposed rent increase, service record, and market evidence aligned on one front page.

Property: 10 Sample Road, Leeds, LS1 1AA

Tenant(s): Alex Tenant, Jordan Tenant

Core facts

Current rent: £1200.00 per month

Proposed rent: £1285.00 per month

Proposed start date: 01 June 2026

Service date: 25 March 2026

Evidence strength: Strong evidence

Challenge band: Moderate likelihood of challenge

Comparable count: 8 used in calculation

Evidence footing

This proposal is grounded in 8 comparable two-bedroom homes used in the market calculation, all listed within the last 90 days and all source-backed.

Current case position: The proposed rent is supported by current market evidence and sits within the lower-to-mid range of comparable properties locally.

Median calculated from 8 comparable listings used in the market calculation.

Listings are filtered for similar bedroom count, property type, distance, and freshness where possible.

No immediate structured warning is recorded from the current comparable and service checks, but the file should still be reviewed before service.

What this file does

It keeps Form 4A, the market evidence, and the proof-of-service record together so the proposed increase can be explained consistently.

If referred to the tribunal, the question is the open-market rent for the property on comparable terms, not simply whether the increase feels large or small.

Service and validity checks

Final check before service: use the correct Form 4A, give at least two months' notice, keep the service method recorded, and make sure the current and proposed rent figures match across the notice and supporting papers.

Rent Increase Summary

If the tenant queries the increase, reply from the same comparable evidence and consider a written agreement if a revised figure or later start date is accepted.

Next step

Serve Form 4A using the recorded method, keep the market evidence and service record with it, and answer any tenant query from the same figures and comparables.

Form 4A

Landlord's notice proposing a new rent for assured tenancies in the private rented sector

Housing Act 1988 section 13(2), as amended

This notice tells you that your landlord is proposing a new rent.

For use in the private rented sector in England only. For tenancies in the social rented sector, use Form 4.

To propose a new rent for an assured agricultural occupancy in the social rented sector use Form 5, and in the private rented sector use Form 5A.

This notice must be served on the tenant(s) at least two months before the new rent can start.

Information for the tenant

This notice is given by your landlord to propose that you pay an increased rent from the date in question 4.6. You should read this notice in full immediately.

If you disagree with the proposed rent or have any questions about this notice you should discuss it with your landlord and/or seek advice.

To challenge the proposed rent you must take action before the date given in question 4.6.

There is information in Section 5 on how to take action if you disagree with the proposed rent and where you can find advice.

Note to landlord: You need to be able to evidence that you served the notice on your tenant. If your written tenancy agreement specifies agreed methods of service, use one of those.

If it does not you can serve it by handing it over to your tenant in person, leaving it at the tenant's address or sending it by registered post.

1. The tenant(s) details

1.1 Name(s) of tenant(s)

Notes to landlord: You can complete and sign this notice electronically or by hand.

Notes to landlord

Note 4.1: Insert how often the rent is paid, such as per week, fortnight, four weeks, month. This is the tenancy period. This must be a month or less.

Note 4.3: If there has not been a rent increase since the start of the tenancy, leave blank.

Note 4.4: This question is required to show whether 52 weeks or 53 weeks need to pass since the last increase. See Note A3. If there has not been an increase since 11 February 2003, leave blank.

Note 4.5: Insert how often the rent should be paid, such as per week, fortnight, four weeks, month. This is the tenancy period. This must be a month or less.

Note 4.6: There are rules about how soon this date can be. See guidance in Note A at the end of this notice.

Note 4.7: It is helpful for the tenants to understand the breakdown of charges included in the rent. Landlords should only include charges which are included in the rent and which the tenant does not pay directly to a third party, or to the landlord in addition to rent.

As this represents a part of the full rent, the frequency is the same as the tenancy period mentioned in question 4.5.

Communication services can include access to a landline telephone, the internet, cable TV and Satellite TV.

Follow the guidance in Note B at the end of this notice.

2. Signature, full name, address, and capacity of signatory (landlord).

3. Signature, full name, address, and capacity of signatory (landlord).

5. What you (the tenant) should do next

5.1 If you accept the proposed new rent, you should make arrangements to pay it.

- If you pay by standing order, update the amount. Get in touch with your bank if you are unsure how to do this.
- If you are claiming Universal Credit, you should tell the Department for Work and Pensions once the rent increase starts. You can find advice at: www.gov.uk/universal-credit/changes-of-circumstances
- If you are claiming Housing Benefit, you should tell your Housing Benefit Office in your local authority. You can find advice at: www.gov.uk/housing-benefit/report-a-change-of-circumstances
- To check affordability, you can search for Local Housing Allowance rates in your local authority at: <https://lha-direct.voa.gov.uk/>

5.2 If you do not accept the new rent, there are steps you must take before the starting date shown in question 4.6. The new rent will start from this date unless you take one of the following actions:

- Agree with your landlord, in writing, to change or delay the rent increase.
- Refer the new rent to the tribunal if you believe the proposed rent is higher than the market rate, or if you believe there is another problem with this notice. For example, if the landlord did not give it to you at least two months before the date of the proposed increase.

The application to the tribunal for a determination of a market rent can be found at:

<https://www.gov.uk/guidance/apply-for-a-market-rent-determination>

The landlord will be able to reply to your application, and you will then have the opportunity to respond to their reply.

The tribunal must receive the application before the start date your landlord has given in question 4.6. If you refer the proposed new rent to the tribunal, tell your landlord or they may otherwise assume you agree with the new rent.

The tribunal can consider other factors like the condition of the property when deciding what the rent for your home should be.

The tribunal will decide what rent the landlord could reasonably expect if the property were let on the open market on the same terms. The amount the tribunal decides might be higher or lower than the rent your landlord has proposed. However, you will not be required to pay more than the rent the landlord first proposed in question 4.5. You do not have to pay the new rent amount until the tribunal has made its decision.

You might find it helpful to check similar properties in your area to get an idea of the market rate.

5.3 If you have any questions about this notice or are worried you might not be able to pay your rent, you should speak with your landlord and/or seek advice. These are places you can find advice:

- the Shelter website: www.shelter.org.uk
- a citizens advice, housing advice centre, or law centre
- a legal representative – you can find a solicitor at:
<https://solicitors.lawsociety.org.uk/>

If you're worried about becoming homeless, you should contact your local authority for support.

Note A: When the proposed new rent can start

A1. The date in question 4.6 of this notice must meet the three requirements below. These requirements are set out in section 13(2) of the Housing Act 1988, as amended by the Regulatory Reform (Assured Periodic Tenancies) (Rent Increases) Order 2003 and the Renters' Rights Act 2025.

A2. First requirement: in all cases, this notice must be served at least two months before the new rent can start.

A3. Second requirement: The first rent increase cannot start until 52 weeks have passed since the tenancy began. For assured agricultural occupancies, this rule is different, and you should use Form 5 in the social rented sector or Form 5A in the private rented sector.

In most cases, any further rent increase must be at least 52 weeks after the previous increase. However, the new rent date cannot be more than 6 days before the anniversary of the date given in question 4.4. If it would be, the landlord must wait an extra week (53 weeks in total) before the increase can start.

This rule prevents rent increase dates from drifting earlier each year, because 52 weeks is slightly less than a calendar year. It ensures that rent increases happen on a consistent annual cycle, protecting tenants from increasingly early rent demands. For example, for a weekly tenancy, the landlord could choose a fixed date such as the first Monday in April each year. This rule, introduced on 11th February 2003, is the reason for question 4.4.

A4. Third requirement: in all cases, the new rent must start at the beginning of a tenancy period. First example: if a monthly tenancy starts on the 20th of April, the new rent must start on the 20th day of the month when the increase begins. Second example: if a weekly tenancy started on a Monday, the new rent must begin on a Monday.

Note B: Guidance on charges included in the rent

B1. In the second and third columns of the table in question 4.7, write either 'nil' or the amount of the proposed charge (which may be the same as now). Only include bills or charges if they are included within the rent and the tenant does not pay these directly to a third party, or to the landlord in addition to rent. Only include service charges where the tenant has agreed in the tenancy agreement to pay a fixed amount.

Do not include any variable service charges (within the meaning of section 18 of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985) that change based on costs.

Rent Increase Justification Report

This report explains why the proposed rent is supported by local comparable evidence.

The proposed rent is supported by current market evidence and sits within the lower-to-mid range of comparable properties locally.

The recorded comparables support the proposed rent and place it below the adjusted median of £1297.50 pcm.

Property: 10 Sample Road, Leeds, LS1 1AA

Key points

- Proposed rent: £1285.00 per month
- Local median: £1297.50 pcm
- Position: Below the adjusted median market rent
- Evidence strength: Strong evidence
- Median basis: Median calculated from 8 comparable listings used in the market calculation.
- Comparable count: 8 used in calculation (8 source-backed; 8 within 90 days)

Market position

Rules version: england_assured_section13_2026-05-01

Adjusted market range: lower quartile £1272.50 pcm | median £1297.50 pcm | upper quartile £1318.75 pcm

Proposed rent: £1285.00 per month (£1285.00 pcm equivalent)

The proposed rent of £1285.00 per month sits between the lower quartile and the median of the adjusted comparable range, against an adjusted range of £1272.50 to £1318.75 pcm and a median of £1297.50 pcm.

Your proposed rent (£1285.00) sits below the median comparable rent (£1297.50 pcm), with strong evidence based on 8 recent source-backed comparables.

Strong evidence is based on 8 comparable homes used in the market calculation, 8 source-backed entries, and 8 comparables dated within the 90-day freshness window. The file reads as a well-supported market review rather than a bare assertion.

The proposed rent looks broadly aligned with the market calculation currently available.

No safer-range guidance is currently needed from the market calculation.

Challenge band: Moderate likelihood of challenge - Based on where your proposed rent sits within the adjusted comparable rent range.

Rent Increase Justification Report

Evidence band: Strong evidence - Based on how many comparables you have, how recent they are, and how many are source-backed rather than manual or heavily overridden.

Recorded reasoning

The proposed rent of £1285.00 per month is below the adjusted median market rent of £1297.50 per month. Based on the comparables analysed under section 13(4) of the Housing Act 1988 (as amended), the proposed increase is presented as reasonable with a moderate likelihood of challenge and strong evidence. The proposed rent reflects recent local listings, condition, and current market positioning for similar two-bedroom homes.

Case-specific note: The proposed rent reflects recent local listings, condition, and current market positioning for similar two-bedroom homes.

Condition and adjustment check

Condition considered: use the saved comparable notes, photographs, and any inspection material kept with the file to explain whether the subject property is stronger, weaker, or broadly similar.

Size and bedroom count considered: 2 bedroom property compared against the saved comparable schedule.

Adjustments applied: no separate manual adjustment is recorded beyond the comparable figures saved in the file, so the landlord position should explain why the chosen comparables were treated as sufficiently similar.

Comparable overview

- Comparable base: 8 comparable two-bedroom properties used in the market calculation, with all listed within the last 90 days and all source-backed
- Challenge band: Moderate likelihood of challenge
- Evidence band: Strong evidence
- Median calculated from 8 comparable listings used in the market calculation.
- Listings are filtered for similar bedroom count, property type, distance, and freshness where possible.

Final checks before service or filing

The tenant can refer the proposed rent to the tribunal up to the day before the proposed start date. The tribunal will determine the open-market rent, which may be higher or lower than the figure proposed, but the tenant will not be required to pay more than the amount first proposed in Form 4A.

Check that Form 4A is the current prescribed notice and that the completed notice matches the final figures in the report.

Confirm that at least two months notice is given, that the proposed start date aligns with the tenancy period, and that the 52/53-week timing rule has been checked.

Check that the service date, proposed start date, and rent figures match the final Form 4A notice, the proof of service record, and the comparable evidence file before sending or relying on them.

If the tenant queries the increase, respond using the same market evidence. If a revised figure or later start date is agreed, record that agreement in writing so it does not conflict with the notice file.

Tenant argument: Property condition is worse than comparables | Response: Deal with condition directly and explain any adjustment or why none was required on the saved evidence. | Evidence to check: property condition comparison sheet, photographs, inspection notes. | Document to refer to: Property Condition Comparison Sheet.
3. Tenant argument: Comparable properties are not similar | Response: Point to locality, bedroom count, and the nearest source-backed examples such as Flat 2, The Calls, Leeds LS1. | Evidence to check: comparable table, distance, source dates. | Document to refer to: Justification Report and Tribunal Argument Summary.
4. Tenant argument: Notice served incorrectly | Response: Keep the reply tied to the recorded method, service date, and the same Form 4A that appears in the file. | Evidence to check: proof of service record and service chronology. | Document to refer to: Proof of Service Record and Cover Letter.
5. Tenant argument: Start date is invalid | Response: Check the two-month notice rule, tenancy-period alignment, and 52/53-week timing before taking a fixed position. | Evidence to check: preview warnings and date calculations. | Document to refer to: Rent Increase Summary and Justification Report.
6. Tenant argument: Tenant cannot afford it | Response: Keep the reply respectful but focused on the tribunal test, which is open-market rent rather than affordability alone. | Evidence to check: open-market comparable evidence and any written proposal for a revised figure or later date. | Document to refer to: Cover Letter and Landlord Response Template.

Negotiation strategy

Stand firm where the comparable evidence is current, consistent, and clearly supports the proposed figure.

Consider a small concession or later start date where the evidence is mixed, a condition point is fair, or a written agreement would avoid an unnecessary tribunal reference.

Record any settlement in writing and make sure any agreed variation does not conflict with the Form 4A position or service record already relied on.

If service is not valid or cannot be proved, the tribunal may reject or discount the notice file before considering market rent.

Tribunal Argument Summary

This is the landlord's concise argument brief for the hearing file.

The proposed rent of £1285.00 per month is supported by current comparable evidence and sits below the adjusted median of £1297.50 pcm.

Adjusted median market rent: £1297.50 pcm

Argument in brief

The proposal should be judged by reference to nearby open-market comparables, not by the size of the increase from the previous rent alone.

The landlord relies on the comparable evidence in this file and says the proposed rent of £1285.00 per month should be judged against that market evidence, not against the size of the increase alone.

The proposed rent looks broadly aligned with the market calculation currently available.

No safer-range guidance is currently needed from the market calculation.

The proposed rent of £1285.00 per month is below the adjusted median market rent of £1297.50 per month. Based on the comparables analysed under section 13(4) of the Housing Act 1988 (as amended), the proposed increase is presented as reasonable with a moderate likelihood of challenge and strong evidence. The proposed rent reflects recent local listings, condition, and current market positioning for similar two-bedroom homes.

Strength of the evidence

Strong evidence is based on 8 comparable homes used in the market calculation, 8 source-backed entries, and 8 comparables dated within the 90-day freshness window. The file reads as a well-supported market review rather than a bare assertion.

Comparable 1: Flat 2, The Calls, Leeds LS1 at raw £1240.00 pcm, adjusted to £1240.00 pcm, dated 15 March 2026. Included because it is a close like-for-like market match.

If challenged, say this

1. Anchor to evidence

Say: The proposed rent is based on comparable local properties and the recorded adjustments, not on a percentage increase alone.

2. Position in the range

Say: The figure sits below the adjusted median of £1297.50 pcm and should be judged against the adjusted comparable range recorded in the report.

Tribunal Argument Summary

3. Strength of evidence

Say: The proposal is supported by 8 source-backed comparables, with 8 listings inside the 90-day freshness window.

4. Bundle integrity

Say: The full bundle includes the notice, service record, justification report, Tribunal Argument Summary, and the supporting documents I rely on.

Important limit

This summary is a concise argument brief drawn from the saved case facts and comparable analysis. It supports presentation of the case, but it does not guarantee a tribunal outcome.

Dear Tenant,

Re: Section 13 rent increase notice

The current rent is £1200.00 per month. The proposed rent is £1285.00 per month, intended to take effect from 01 June 2026.

Please find enclosed Form 4A for 10 Sample Road, Leeds, LS1 1AA, together with the rent increase report and service record. The report sets out the comparable market evidence relied on for the proposed figure.

This proposal is grounded in 8 comparable two-bedroom homes used in the market calculation, all listed within the last 90 days and all source-backed. The proposed rent sits below the adjusted median of £1297.50 pcm.

The proposed rent is supported by current market evidence and sits within the lower-to-mid range of comparable properties locally. Moderate likelihood of challenge; Strong evidence.

The notice has been recorded as served by First class post on 25 March 2026.

The tenant can refer the proposed rent to the tribunal up to the day before the proposed start date. The tribunal will determine the open-market rent, which may be higher or lower than the figure proposed, but the tenant will not be required to pay more than the amount first proposed in Form 4A.

Please contact me using the details above if you would like to discuss the proposed rent before the start date. Any agreed change should be confirmed in writing.

Yours sincerely,

Taylor Landlord

Tribunal Defence Guide

This guide shows how to present the Section 13 file clearly if the tenant refers the notice to the tribunal. The landlord relies on the comparable evidence in this file and says the proposed rent of £1285.00 per month should be judged against that market evidence, not against the size of the increase alone. Challenge band: Moderate likelihood of challenge. Evidence band: Strong evidence.

If the tenant applies

If the tenant refers the notice to the tribunal before the proposed start date, review the application promptly and answer from the same evidence base used in this pack.

Keep the Form 4A notice, proof of service record, justification report, Tribunal Argument Summary, photos, EPC, safety documents, and any negotiation correspondence together in one hearing file.

What to file and bring

Bring the merged tribunal bundle, printed copies of supporting evidence, and a short chronology covering the tenancy start date, any earlier increase, and the proposed effective date.

Use the same band wording throughout: Moderate likelihood of challenge and Strong evidence.

How to explain the evidence

Explain why the chosen comparables are relevant, how each adjustment affects the monthly equivalent, and why any user override was applied.

If a point is weak or missing, acknowledge it briefly and return to the strongest nearby comparables rather than overstating the file.

Negotiation and settlement

Stand firm where the comparable evidence is current, consistent, and clearly supports the proposed figure.

Consider a small concession or later start date where the evidence is mixed or a condition point is fairly raised, but record any agreement in writing so it stays aligned with the notice file.

Keep your position consistent

Keep returning to the same market anchor: the proposal is based on 8 comparable two-bedroom properties used in the market calculation, with all listed within the last 90 days and all source-backed, not on a target percentage increase.

If challenged, refer back to the recorded comparable table and the adjustments already applied.

Describe the proposal as below the adjusted median market rent and keep the explanation tied to the Form 4A, proof of service, and justification report rather than speculation about what the tribunal may do.

Be ready to explain property condition, tenancy-period alignment, and how the earliest valid start date was calculated under the post-1 May 2026 rules.

Tribunal Defence Guide

If service is not valid or cannot be proved, the tribunal may reject or discount the notice file before considering market rent.

Landlord Response Template

Suggested wording for a landlord reply if the tenant asks the tribunal to determine the market rent.

The recorded comparables support the proposed rent and place it below the adjusted median of £1297.50 pcm.

Property: 10 Sample Road, Leeds, LS1 1AA

Suggested response

I am the landlord or authorised agent for 10 Sample Road, Leeds, LS1 1AA. Form 4A was served on 25 March 2026 proposing a rent of £1285.00 per month from 01 June 2026.

The tenancy is currently charged at £1200.00 per month. The notice date and proposed start date were selected so the rent review timetable recorded in the file is met.

The landlord relies on the comparable evidence exhibited with the justification report. The analysis shows an adjusted median market rent of £1297.50 per month, with the proposed rent sitting below the adjusted median of £1297.50 pcm.

The comparable schedule uses nearby properties of similar size and adjusts them to a monthly equivalent so that like is compared with like. The proposal is based on that market evidence, not on a target percentage increase from the historic rent alone.

The landlord therefore asks the tribunal to determine that the proposed rent is supported by the market evidence, or alternatively to set the market rent at the nearest figure supported by the exhibited comparables.

Points to confirm in any witness statement or reply

1. Service method and service date: First class post on 25 March 2026.
2. Proposed start date: 01 June 2026.
3. Comparable base: 8 comparable two-bedroom properties used in the market calculation, with all listed within the last 90 days and all source-backed.
4. Current banding: challenge risk is Moderate likelihood of challenge and evidence strength is Strong evidence.
5. Any manual adjustment or override should be tied back to a recorded factual difference in the comparable schedule and not left as an unexplained preference.

Evidence to attach

Attach the completed Form 4A, proof of service record, justification report, Tribunal Argument Summary, relevant exhibits, and any correspondence showing attempts to resolve the issue before a hearing.

If photos, EPC records, or tenancy documents are relied on, label them consistently with the bundle index so the tribunal can move from the statement to the exhibit without confusion.

Tribunal Legal Briefing

This briefing pulls together the main statutory and practical points that sit behind the landlord evidence file.

The recorded comparables support the proposed rent and place it below the adjusted median of £1297.50 pcm.

Statutory framework

This pack is prepared on the basis of Housing Act 1988 section 13(2) and section 13(4), as amended for assured tenancies from 1 May 2026.

The new rent must be proposed on Form 4A, served with at least two months notice, aligned to the tenancy period, and timed so that the 52-week / 53-week anti-drift rule is satisfied.

What the tribunal considers

The tribunal considers the market rent for the property on the open market, assuming the same terms, letting circumstances, and tenant obligations unless the evidence shows a meaningful difference.

Comparable selection, adjustment discipline, and evidence freshness are therefore central. Unsupported or stale comparables weaken the landlord case even where the notice itself is valid.

Practical hearing points

Current banding: Moderate likelihood of challenge | Strong evidence.

Stay consistent with the report wording. Do not overstate the data. If the evidence is mixed, acknowledge that plainly and explain why the proposed figure still sits within a reasonable market range.

Points the file still has to prove

The landlord still needs to show that the notice was validly served, that the proposed start date satisfies the statutory timing rules, and that the proposed rent is the figure best supported by the comparable evidence on the tribunal date.

A clean service record, a stable chronology, and current comparables usually matter more than broad statements that the increase felt reasonable at the time it was proposed.

If service is not valid or cannot be proved, the tribunal may reject or discount the notice file before considering market rent.

Common weakness points

Watch for stale comparables, missing source dates, unsupported manual overrides, or a mismatch between the dates in Form 4A, the proof of service record, and the narrative documents.

If one comparable is challenged, be ready to show why the remaining comparables still support the proposed rent or where the nearest supported alternative figure sits.
